JOHNSON, Harvey Huston. November 26, 1936. Harvey H. Johnson, Pioneer Resident, Dies Suddenly of Angina Pectoris—Came to Douglas From Bisbee in 1902. Harvey Huston Johnson, of the firm of Reay & Johnson and a pioneer resident of Douglas, died quite suddenly yesterday morning from an attack of angina pectoris. Mr. Johnson had gone about his work as usual, early in the morning, directing his crew in handling the trucks used by his firm in collecting the garbage about the city for which they are contractors. As he worked, about 7 a.m. he called attention to his employees to the fact his left hand was getting numb. He was taken quickly to his home on Ninth street and the family physician was called. W.J. Reay, partner of Mr. Johnson, also was summoned hastily to the home. As his physician and his friends worked to relieve his trouble, Mr. Johnson talked with them, being conscious and anxious as to his case until his final breath. It was announced last night funeral services will be conducted Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Elks' home, Rev. Dr. George W. Thomas of the Presbyterian church in charge. The Elks ritual will be carried out in the lodge room by the lodge. The services at the grave will be the committal service of the Masonic lodge, of which Mr. Johnson had long been a member, to the degree of the mystic shrine. Harvey Huston Johnson was born in Arkansas on July 18, 1878, one of two sons of Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Johnson, both long since dead. He came to Arizona from New Mexico about 1901, locating first at Bisbee where he was employed in the mines. He had been engaged, while residing in New Mexico, in the freighting business. After he worked about the mines for something more than a year, Mrs. Johnson came to Douglas and engaged, with his father and brother, Alonzo, in the transfer and livery stable business. The transfer office was in the barber shop of the old Ord hotel which stood where the First National Bank building now is. In 1906, Mr. Johnson engaged in a partnership with W.J. Reay and that partnership had continued since. They used horses during the first years of their business and their stable was where the Ida B. Lawrence millinery shop now is located. Later they moved to the corner of F. avenue and Ninth street, the premises now occupied by Arp and Arp as a garage. They used about 30 horses. From Ninth Street they removed to G. avenue where they bought the business of Bowden's livery stable and continued there until 1916 when they bought the lot and erected the building where the Reay & Johnson transfer and storage business now is. Henry Clay Sparks was the contractor for the building. The firm bought its first motor truck in 1911, a Federal, one and one-half ton truck. Their second truck was added during the Mexican revolution. Mr. Johnson's firm has been the leading concern in transfer trucking and storage for many years in Douglas and Mr. Johnson was always the directing head in handling the equipment on the work, Mr. Reay handling the office end. They handled all types of transfer and trucking contracts and three times have held the city garbage contract. Both the father and brother of Mr. Johnson died in Douglas, the brother about 10 years ago. The deceased was twice married. His first wife died several years ago and some 18 months ago he married Mrs. Lutie Brown, who survives him. In addition to his widow, he is survived by his son, Harvey H. Johnson, Jr., a son by his first wife, and two step-daughters, Mrs. H. Horton Henry, now in Spain, and Mrs. May Rose Woodford, the latter in Los Angeles. Mr. Henry is in the diplomatic service. KRUGER, Julius. July 26, 1934. Bisbee Merchant Shoots Himself; Leaves Message. Coroner Announces No Inquest Is Necessary After Investigation. Bisbee, July 25. Julius Kruger, age 52, a merchant in Bisbee for the last 17 years, was found shot to death in the rear of his store on Brewery Gulch shortly after noon today under conditions definitely pointing to suicide. After an investigation of the death, Coroner L.T. Frazier announced that there would be no need of an inquest. Friends of Kruger told police that he was despondent and that he had been hinting of taking his own life within the last few days, and three notes, all written in Yiddish, left behind by the dead man, revealed that he had carefully planned the act. To his wife living in Tucson, he said he was "ending it all and end 30 years of suffering." In another note, addressed to I. Jacobson Kruger asked that he be buried in Douglas. He asked that a suit of clothes be taken from his store to bury him in and requested that the funeral be inexpensive. Apparently no one heard the shot that snuffed out the life of Kruger but Dr. Charlton Jay, county physician, estimated the man evidently had been shot since about midnight or shortly after. Charles Fruitman, a long time friend of the dead man, instigated the investigation that led to the discovery of the body shortly after noon. Fruitman told police he visited Kruger yesterday afternoon and that the latter appeared to be in a highly nervous state. He was hastily scribbling a note, Fruitman said, when he called and when Fruitman entered the store he put the note aside and murmured: "Oh, well, they'll know soon enough anyway." Apparently this was one of the three notes which police found when they broke into the establishment. When Fruitman failed to see his friend this morning, he went to his apartment and he was not there. He then went to his store and found it locked from the inside. Peering through the window of the door he saw a note had been placed in the key ring. Fruitman immediately notified police and Chief Ramsower broke the lock on the door. In the back part of the store they found Kruger lying dead in a pool of blood, a .38 calibre Iver Johnson lying under him. One shot had been fired into his head. He had fallen forward on his face and lay with his arms crumpled up under him. He was in shirt sleeves and wore gray trousers. After an investigation by officers, the body of Kruger was removed to the Hubbard mortuary to await plans of the family regarding the funeral. Mr. Kruger is survived by the widow and five children and a brother in Dallas. The widow has lived in Tucson for the last two years. A daughter, Julia, and a son, Dave, live with their mother. Three other sons survive, Morris of Wichita Falls, Ted of New York City and Max of Houston, Texas. The decedent came here from Dallas in 1917 and has operated stores in Brewery Gulch and on Main street since that time. He formerly operated a jewelry store on Main street but for the last few years had operated his store in Brewery Gulch, which contained an assortment of merchandise such as clothing, firearms and dry goods. Douglas Dispatch (buried in the Douglas Jewish Cemetery).
