PYEATT, Mary. December 22, 1949. Pioneer Ranch Woman Dies; Last Rites Held At Canille. Fought Indians In Early Days; Was Personal Friend of Clanton Boys. Mrs. Mary Pyeatt, 79, one of the last rancher pioneers of the Huachuca area, died early Sunday morning at the Rest Home where she had been a patient about six months. While never living in Tombstone during the active years of her life, she was intimately acquainted with parts of its history. Born in San Antonio, Texas, she came to Tombstone in 1880 and settled first in Brown's Canyon, where she lived for two years. At that time she moved to what is now the Pyeatt ranch just over the Huachuca mountains. In 1887 she married Henry Pyeatt in Charleston. Her husband died in March 1942. "Grandma" Pyeatt, as she was affectionately known by her family and friends, knew much of the hardships of frontier life. More than one time she had to do her share of the fighting in warding off attacking Apache marauders, who at the time made life miserable for all ranchers in the mountain areas. She was a personal friend of the Clantons and spoke highly of the young men who were killed in the famous OK Corral gun battle. Until the last few years, Mrs. Pyeatt took an active part in the management of the ranch, but failing health forced her to move to town some months ago where she could have a doctor's care. Funeral services were held today (Wed.) at 1:30 at Black Oak Cemetery at Canille. Surviving are five sons, Seth of Florence; Lon and Irvin of Tombstone; Buster of Canille and Russell of Nogales; two daughters, Mrs. Gilbert Hanley, Bisbee and Mrs. Luella Cooper, Tucson; and one brother, Dave Kenny of Texas. She leaves 33 grandchildren and 21 great-grandchildren. A son, Joe Pyeatt, and a daughter, Mrs. Ozella Kooger, preceded her in death. Pallbearers were Fred Bennett, John Giacom, and W.A. Tyler of this city; Will Farrell, Jim Parker, and Will Roath of Canille. Dungan-Hennessy Mortuary of Bisbee had charge of the arrangements. One of her grandsons, Gene Pyeatt is commander of Roy Fourr Post, American Legion and heads the city's water department. Tombstone Epitaph.
